

Abstract of the Invention

Copper electroplating baths containing one or more suppressor compounds capable of providing copper filled sub-micron sized apertures free of pits and voids are provided. Such copper electroplating baths are useful in the manufacture of electronic devices, such as printed wiring boards and integrated circuits.